Kick off for a fabulous Pride season 2026

Hey, it's June which means it's summer and the kick-off of the soccer World Cup in North America on 11 June. Let's hope that tournament organisers FIFA don't cave into LGBTQ+ human rights like they did last time when they allowed LGBTQ+ unfriendly Qatar to host. More pinkly, June is also the kick-off Pride season. We at PinkUK Towers work hard to list all the season's Pride festivals in the UK and around the world to help you plan your summer. June starts with a bang on day one with seven prides on the 1st and 530 prides taking place around the world across the month. Plan your summer and check out our full listings.

Away from all the fun, we should remember that just like our chaotic weather in the UK which in May yoyo-ed from unseasonably cool to record breaking heatwaves, the political picture for Pink human rights is mixed. High fives for the UK Government's belated announcement via His Majesty King Charles of a ban on conversion therapies. This has been a series of broken promises stretching back almost ten years to ensure a ban and one that is Trans inclusive. So a huge welcome but we'll believe it when the Government delivers and His Majesty King Charlie nods his Royal Assent to the new law. Less positive is the recent guidance from the Orwellian titled UK 'Equality and Human Rights Commission' which has just enshrined the right for venues to exclude Trans people from toilets or changing rooms if they are not of the same biological gender. This follows last year's UK Supreme Court ruling which said the legal definition of a woman is her biological gender. PinkUK stands with our Trans community in this time of uncertainty. We all wish you a fantastic and incredibly Pink June.
